Computation of Life. Not by the years we live. But by the good we do to those around should life computed be. Not by the wealth attained, Should we possession count, but by that given To aid humanity.

The weaker portion—brothers all— Off tempted and off yielding through Their kindly hearts to wrong. Then to lead back once more. With firm but gentle hand, by loving word And voice taught to be strong.

No nobler mission, nor More honored work hath man in life than this,
And no more worthy aim.
And no more worthy aim.

Jennie. I know a maiden, blithe and fair. With rosy cheek and wave at hair. Two bazel eyes beyond compare— My Jeunie.

And would you know a bliss so sweet As borderia d where angels meet? It is where glide the nimble feet Of Jennie. Thou, true love, art excell'd by none; Pretty as e er the sun shons on; Love's climax, yea, my "number one," TROMAS DAVIS.

Rhymes of the Season. Now tulip gay and daffodil With sweet perfume the air do fill. And buttercups and daisies white Will fill our souls with pure delight. Bright butterflies and honey bees Will sport among the flowers and trees. The birds will carol forth sweet notes, Lovers' sall on the lake in boats. With Summer's sun's hot scorching rays We'll in the country spend our days. Go to the Central Park for air. But Central Park " won't "take the Fair:

ADA ROBINSON. Then and Now. THEN.

Time: 2 A. M. A smile,

A shake. A parting kiss. And the lover homeward swaggers. Now.

Same time (six months later),
A "smile,"
A "hake,"
A "parting drink."
And the husband homeward "staggers."
A. J. L.

Epitaph on a Dog. The Summer sun in a golden glow was sinking in the West.
And all the air seemed husbed and sad as we laid poor Shep to rest.
In a quiet, shady valley where the soft winds gently blow.
We sadly laid his body where sweet Summer flowers grow.
One last fond look at the dear old form, and we left him there alone.
'Mid the green clad hills and forest glades, where in life he loved to roam.
No tombetone marks his lonely grave, no poet his praises sing. No tembelone marks his lonely grave, no poet his praises sting.

But the memory of his poble deeds to our hearts will ever cling.

Then fare thee well thou dear old friend, we bid thee a last a lieu.

Few nobler lives have ever lived, few friends have been more true.

J. E. B.

Sell Not Thyself for Gold. Though this wicked world bring trouble And miseries untold.

Trust to the winding waps of fate, Sell not thyself for spid.

Though dark the cloud hangs o'er thee, And few the trumps you hold, Wait for the silver lining, Sell not thyself for gold.

Though all thy friends desert thee And the tempter seems most bold, Take courage, friend, and persevere Bell not thyself for gold. J. McC. Decidedly Future.

In mighty faith New Yorkers gaze, With eager sight and keen, Down tistas long of future days And see their streets are clean. Ten thousand years, at least, must flow In series swift, serone. Ere wond'ring strangers home can go And say our streets are clean. Perchance some lone New Yorker may in Paradise be seen; But he would never want to stay Where any streets were clean. Julius Hamilton.

Those Little Shoes. One night as I looked through an old oak Che-t, Filled with treasures antique and rare, I found two little red woollen sooks, And of shoes a very much trodden pair, Gather the sandals of Eastern climes.
Trimmed with gems of the Southern Sea
That soarkle and glow like sun-kissed ·lew,
But these are dearer far to me.

They tell of a smile with loveliness dacked,
Of a voice that once was sweet melody;
They tell of a form on life's ocean wrecked,
That drifted away to the unknown sea.

Guilt, like an iron door or barricade,
For strength internal and for comfort made.
This disadvantage hath: It shuts from view
The prespect of the beautiful and true;
Within is darkness and without is night;
Within is weakness and without is might;
The blissful horitage of those within,
The promised peace and happiness of sin,

"The Baroness Burdett-Coutte is a great friend of hers, and she has visited the Duchess of Westminster and the Princess Mary of Teck."

Mr. Abud looked se extremely delighted as he mentioned these great names, that it seemed a pity he could not repeat them. The Duchess of Westminster and Princess Mary of Teck on each side of the "Paul Jones" programme would be very striking. "Miss Huntingdon" continued Mr. Abud. "has never sung in New York. She has placed her career in the hands of Mr. Mayer and myself. There is a possibility of our bringing Mms. Marie Roze to this country, also Van Blene, the violoncellist, and Wolfe, the violinist."

Mr. Abud was comparatively dumb on the subject of Miss Mary Anderwon. He said that Americans knew a great deal more about her than he did. She was in Italy at the present time, and he had not met her personally since she left America. He had seen a great deal of Dr. Hamilton Griffin. Of general pews Mr. Abud was more liberal. Nat Goodwin, he said, would open July 21 at the Gaiety Theatre. Miss Loie Fuller was now the understudy of Miss Nellie Farren at the Gaiety Theatre, and the arrangement was extremely agreeable to all parties. Miss Minnie Paimer did a large business at the Gaiety Theatre, and the arrangement was extremely agreeable to all parties. Miss Minnie Paimer did a large business at the Grand Theatre, but her matiness of "My Brother's Sister" at another theatre had been less successful. Mr. Abud will probably return to England next Saturday.

Teddy Marks on Broadway yesterday saw a handsomely dressed woman in a carriage suddenly becken to the driver to stop. A moment later she had signalled Mr. Marks to approach her. "I want you," she said, "to make out an estimate for me of the cost of an opera company, principals and chorus, with railroad lares and all the rest of it. Don't lorget it. I have money." With that she drove off, leaving Mr. Marks planted there. The larly was Mabel de Bebian, an actress known at the dramatic agencies.

The $\mathbb{R}^*$ Shenandoah" company left for San Francisco vesterday. The Saturday night celebration in Proctor's Theatre pleased the members of the commany as much as it did the audience. The presence of Gen. Sherman in the box was great attraction. The General never moved his eyes from the stage, except to explain some of the war details to the friends who were with him. He wept at the death of the young soldier, and rosrest with laughter at the hummrous Irishman. He has seen the play, it is said, six or seven times.

These are busy days with the athletes of the big universities. All are getting ready for the great intercollegiate meeting. Sherrill, Tale's great sprinter. Is said to be in fine form again, and Luther Carey, the Princeton fiver, has recovered from the effects of his recent poisoning to such an extent as to be able to train regularly. There will be great fun in the sprints between the great ones. Columbia Collage has two good mentin the aprints, Herbert Shipman and Mapes.

Make Breslin has accepted the challenge of Jimmy Conners, the Buffalo light-weight, and the two will meet within four weeks at some responsible Club for a suitable purse besides the stakes.

The first annual Spring meeting of the Berkeley Athletic Club will be held May 17 at the Berkeley Oval. The oval has been subjected to many improvements since last season, and is now one of the finest athletic grounds about this city.

To-morrow night at the California Athletic Club Jimmy Carroll, the well-known and popular middleweight of Brooklyn will meet Billy Smith, the champion middleweight of Australia, for a purso of $1,200. Judring by the aplendid showing Carroll made in his match with Mike Lucie, and the great reputation Smith brings with him from the Antipodes this meeting should prove one of the most interesting of the year.

Billy Murray and Tommy Kelly, the Harlem Spider, meet this afternoon at the liteatrated News office to bind a match. P. H. Black represents Kelly. It is probable the men will untually make concessions to bring the weight right. Murray is the well-known 110-pound pugilist.
